"Autocross is fun.
Getting faster is even more fun..."

—Tony Shulthise

Walk the course at least 5 times with focus. The more you chat about the weather the less you will probably pick up about the course. Save the chats until after the walk when you taunt your now "slower than you" competitor friends. Don't stop walking until you can close your eyes and run the course in your mind picturing EVERY feature on the course including key cones. It helps to draw a crude sketch of the course and make notes for sections you want to pay close attention to. When you take your first run you won't be using half of your brain power trying to figure out where to go next. On your first run it will feel like you've already driven the course several times.

After every run WRITE DOWN (only) one thing you felt you did very well and (only) one thing you want to focus on the next run. Writing them down one at a time and only focusing on one change per run is a key to getting faster by run 4 or 5 vs just making different mistakes and not knowing what helped/hurt. If you don't write them down you will probably forget what you were thinking with all the processing your mind is having to do. Take your notes on the course map you drew during your course walk to put them on proper context.

If you can catch Tony leading the Novice Walk don't miss out!
